

Chris Haack joins the Russell Communications Division of Russell Electric

Bettendorf, Iowa, March 15, 2009 – Russell Communication is proud to announce the addition of Chris Haack as Operations Manager. Chris is a native of Bettendorf now living in Princeton, Iowa, with his wife and four children.

He is a graduate of Bettendorf High School. He continued his higher education at Hamilton Technical College and Glendale Community College in Glendale, California. He also served four years at Fort Bragg in North Carolina. Chris joins Russell Electric as Operations Manager of the Communications Division. He brings with him 20 years experience in the communications, security and life safety industry. Chris will be focusing on day-to-day operations management with emphasis on growth in life safety, including security, fire alarms, card access and audio/visual.

Russell Electric, founded in 1948 as an electrical contractor, has three major divisions, Russell Electric, Russell Communications and Electric Doctor. In 2005 Russell Electric expanded to the telephone and data communications industry specializing in business telephone installations. Russell Communications offers Voice over Internet Protocol telephone systems, business telephones, security camera systems and card access systems. Russell Electric launched Electric Doctor in the fall of 2007 to provide unprecedented 24-hour service to the small task residential customer. Russell Electric is the only stocking Guardian factory trained; factory authorized home generator dealer in a 60-mile radius. We welcome Chris to our organization and wish him success.
